The student will demonstrate knowledge of the challenges faced by the new nation by

a) identifying the weaknesses of the government established by the Articles of Confederation.

The Articles of Confederation was a constitution written during the American Revolution to establish the powers of the new national government.

Weaknesses of the Articles of Confederation-

- Provided for a weak national government
- Gave Congress no power to tax or regulate commerce among the states
- Provided for no common currency
- Gave each state one vote regardless of size
- Provided for no executive or judicial branches

Outcomes of the Articles of Confederation

  - Outlined the process for admitting a new state to the Union
  - Outlawed slavery in the new territories

The Constitutional Convention

- State delegates met in Philadelphia and decided not to revise the Articles of Confederation but to write a new constitution.
- George Washington was elected president of the Constitutional Convention.
- James Madison became known as the “Father of the Constitution.”
- Delegates debated over how much power should be given to the new national government and how large and small states should be represented in the new government.

- The structure of the new national government included three separate branches of government:
  - Legislative (makes the laws)
  - Executive (carries out the laws)
  - Judicial (interprets the laws)

- The Great Compromise decided how many votes each state would have in the Senate and the House of Representatives.

- The Constitution was signed at the end of the convention.
Ratification of the Constitution

- A minimum of nine of the thirteen states had to vote in favor of the Constitution before it could become law.

The Bill of Rights

- Based on the Virginia Declaration of Rights (George Mason) and the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom (Thomas Jefferson)
- These first ten amendments to the Constitution provide a written guarantee of individual rights (e.g., freedom of speech, freedom of religion).
